

I Keep my Depression

I keep my depression in a box and nobody knows it's there

I keep my depression in a box; I wish I could post it somewhere

I keep my depression in a box and look at it some of the time

I keep my depression in a box and wish that it were not mine

I keep my depression in a box but want it to go away

I keep my depression in a box; I don't want it to stay

I keep my depression in a box and this might give you pause

I keep my depression in a box – where do you keep yours?

I locked my depression in a box and threw away the key.

I locked my depression in a box so it could not influence me.

I locked my depression in a box and buried it deep away.

I locked my depression in a box and wanted to run away.

I locked my depression in a box and decided to hide in my bed.

I locked my depression in a box, is there something wrong in my head?

I locked my depression in a box, but I locked myself away too;

I locked my depression in a box, so why am I feeling so blue

I took my depression to the doctor – it took me a year or so

I took my depression to the doctor- to pluck up the courage to go

I took my depression to the doctor, I cried and I cried and I cried

I took my depression to the doctor since I felt so ashamed inside

I took my depression to the doctor- it's starting to go away

I took my depression to the doctor and now I'm beginning to play

I took my depression to the doctor, why don't you come too

I took my depression to the doctor - maybe you won't feel so blue.